

Cultures of Climate

Be part of #hudclimatemural!

We would love for you to share your responses to the questions on the physical mural and be part of the wider digital Cultures of Climate Mural.

You can do this by posting on social media using the hashtag #hudclimatemural and tagging @culturesof_ in your post so we can share it!

Responses could be anything from photos of your favourite outdoor space or plant on campus, poems, artworks, illustrations to images of you taking part in one of the Sustainability Team's brilliant initiatives such as tree planting days or gardening.

#hudclimatemural is an evolving digital mural showcasing the community's response to green and blue spaces on campus and beyond, allowing discovery of new natural spaces, initiatives and thoughts towards the campus as a place linked to nature.

The Cultures of Climate Mural is a part of Cultures of Climate, the fourth iteration of the School of Arts and Humanities' annual Cultures Of programme of place-based development from the Centre for Cultural Ecologies in Art, Design, and Architecture. Running from 2025 to 2026, Cultures of Climate features exhibitions, installations, performances, workshops, podcasts, talks, and discussions about the climate crisis through art and creative activities.

The Sustainability Team works with the School of Arts and Humanities and other parts of the university to deliver environmental and social initiatives and events that can also provide wellbeing, learning and skills development benefits. Get in touch with us at sustainability@hud.ac.uk to become a Sustainability Champion and to participate in the Green Rewards league table, a fun and competitive way to improve your environmental and social impact while earning prizes in the process!
